Relations Council

2020 IMPACT REPORT

Letter from the Executive Director & President

WE CANNOT YET SAY how our reality will be permanently altered in the wake of the coronavirus and the enduring crises we have faced this year. But there is one realization from this chapter of the story we're living through: JCRC's commitment to fulfilling its mission remains constant. When the pandemic hit, our response was deeply rooted in our understanding of JCRC's core purpose.

Our work has proven essential to Boston's Jewish community time and time again. Throughout the global health crisis and economic downturn, JCRC helped Jewish agencies and local non-profits secure critical federal, state and local funding to address immediate needs. We combatted rising COVID-related food insecurity, homelessness, and economic devastation. And during the simultaneous resurgence of the movement for racial justice, JCRC galvanized the Jewish community of our region to stand with our partners in the Black community. We committed to dismantling racism and advocated for the social services network, leveraging our partnerships to compel action. At every step of the way, the organized Jewish community has stepped in to extend a hand of support and solidarity.

This year, JCRC transitioned quickly to respond to the evolving needs of the Greater Boston community, finding innovative ways to mobilize our community members, such as our new virtual Speaker Series, engaging leaders in the community with crucial issues such as Defending Democracy and Combating White Supremacy.

At the same time, JCRC's commitment to our core mission never wavered. We stayed true to our mandate to create consensus in our diverse community and advocate for the collective needs and priorities of the Jewish community of Greater Boston. Despite our physical distance, we strengthened relationships with elected officials, bolstered partnerships in the interfaith community, advocated on behalf of Israel, and took steps to keep our community secure.

JEREMY BURTON
Executive Director

STACEY BLOOM
President

In the pages of this report, you will read about the resolve, steadfastness, and care that drove JCRC's work this year. Together, we endeavored to achieve JCRC's vision of a Greater Boston where the policy priorities of the Jewish community are implemented, and Jewish social service agencies are well-funded. Thank you to every JCRC partner, donor, volunteer, and leader who worked with us this year.

Writing this in February 2021, we can't tell you what the story will be in a year from now, but we can tell you how we're going to meet the moment: through our deep, lasting relationships with elected officials, interfaith clergy, and civic leaders throughout Greater Boston.

We will continue to work collectively for the health and vibrancy of our broader Boston community. We will continue to amplify the broad center of our community and honor the integrity of our civic space. We will continue to ensure that we are authentically representing Jewish concerns in the hardest conversations and the moments of crisis that impact us all.

Our Response to COVID

As more members of our Greater Boston community struggled to meet basic needs, JCRC worked with our partners to uphold the social safety net and to promote equitable access to resources for Boston's most vulnerable populations. JCRC's advocacy and organizing team advocated for our neighbors, fighting to secure resources for those who needed it the most during this time.

OUR WEEKLY "TAKE ACTION" CAMPAIGN EMAILS provided opportunities for our community to support our partners during the crisis, including 72 young adult volunteers who called and bought groceries for residents of residents of Hebrew Senior Life or 2Life Communities.

JCRC and GBIO worked directly

OUR RESPONSE TO THE PANDEMIC INCLUDED:

- Leading the charge with our colleagues across the country and our partners at Jewish Federations of North America to urge Congress to expand the Paycheck Protection Loan (PPP) program for vital nonprofits. After our initial success in making sure that nonprofits were included in the first round of Small Business Administration (SBA) PPP loans, we worked to ensure that the next phase of the legislation calling for an additional $250 billion for the SBA loans was accessible to larger nonprofits and that unemployment insurance was available to previously ineligible employees in the Commonwealth. We continued to advocate for additional funds to further address community needs in subsequent legislative packages.
- Working directly with Gov. Baker's re-opening task force to make sure that Jewish concerns were heard. With our partners in the Greater Boston Interfaith Organization (GBIO), we organized and lead a presentation from faith communities to the re-opening task force, to ensure that faith communities and house of worship were understood as an "essential" part of the fabric of the community and of any successful re-opening.
- Helping a food pantry obtain kosher certification for distribution of needed food.
- Advocating for day cares, summer camps and preschools to receive funding for PPE and to sustain their operations during the pandemic.
- Pivoting to a virtual speaker series to engage leaders in the community on critical issues.

JCRC ADVOCATED FOR YES ON 2, the campaign to adopt Ranked Choice Voting (RCV) in Massachusetts. We educated our community about how this voting system enhances democracy, and the benefits of adopting ranked choice voting, including convening an explanatory discussion with two of the leaders of the campaign, Evan Falchuk, campaign chair, and Tanisha M. Sullivan, honorary co-chair and President of the NAACP Boston (pictured right).

Defending Democracy

We at JCRC believe that no one should be forced to make an impossible choice between protecting their personal health and safety, and their right to vote.

The principles adopted by our Council for defending democracy guided our response to the challenges our country faced in conducting a free, fair, and safe election.

We acted on our commitment to upholding a robust democratic process and ensuring that elections in the Commonwealth reflect the diversity of voices in our community.

OUR WORK TO DEFEND DEMOCRACY INCLUDED:

- Working with partner organizations to successfully pass a sweeping new Elections law, ensuring safe and accessible elections for voters in 2020 across Massachusetts, including vote-by-mail legislation, expanding absentee voting, preserving in-person voting, carefully balancing the safety of poll workers and voters, minimizing suppressive tactics, and expanding early voting options.
- Advocating for immediate federal action and funding to support state and local elections, implementation of these reforms, and ensuring the United States Postal Service's capacity and solvency to meet the increased demands from the COVID-19 pandemic.
- Running a wide-ranging Get Out the Vote campaign to educate our community for the primary and general elections, and shaping the debate on the Massachusetts 4th district congressional race, one of particular interest to the Jewish community, given that it has the largest Jewish population of any seat in New England (with 75,000 Jews). JCRC provided multiple opportunities for the community to learn about the candidates and their positions.
- In partnership with the Mass Council of Churches and the Black Ministerial Alliance, we worked directly with municipal officials and law enforcement to be pro-active and prepare clergy for any potential violence after the elections, such as targeting of houses of worship and communities, including our own.
- Inviting Director of ACLU's Racial Justice Program Rahsaan Hall to discuss safe and fair elections, defending democracy in the age of COVID-19 with the JCRC Council.

our Partners

Beverly Williams, Councilor Edwards, Tema Smith

OUR WORK TO FIGHT FOR RACIAL JUSTICE:

- JCRC successfully advocated with our partners in the Greater Boston Interfaith Organization to pass a Police Reform bill, which created a system for certifying and decertifying officers (the first in the country led by civilians), imposed limits on the use of force and imposed limits on the use of force, chokeholds, and no-knock warrants, ban racial profiling and put enforcement powers behind that ban; and end the requirement of police officers in schools.
- We invited Boston City Councilor Lydia Edwards to speak with leaders from our network of member agencies for a candid conversation about housing and criminal and racial justice.
- We engaged Diversity Advocate Tema Smith to train the JCRC Council on more effectively engaging and representing Jews of Color.
- We provided consultation to local synagogues on meaningful ways to connect with Black community partners and advance racial equity.

YOM HASHOAH

Amplifying the voices of survivors and eyewitnesses to history has never been more crucial. In April, we held a virtual Yom HaShoah gathering with 330 members of our community to honor our local Holocaust survivors and transmit their legacy. The program, led by Combined Jewish Philanthropies President & CEO Rabbi Marc Baker, included a message from Governor Baker expressing his solidarity with our community.

"Thank you to JCRC for all you do to keep this particular history in our hearts and in our minds. It's so important that we never forget and are always vigilant. We should honor and remember all those who were lost, and we should always stand up for our Jewish neighbors and our Jewish friends anywhere, anywhere, always."

– CHARLIE BAKER, Governor of Massachusetts

Hatred

In recent years, we have watched with horror as expressions and acts of antisemitism have increased in this country, and Holocaust denial and ignorance have reached alarming proportions. We at JCRC have risen to meet these challenges by joining with our interfaith and legislative partners to fight hatred and bigotry in every form, by educating the next generation, and leveraging public funding to safeguard Jewish institutions under threat.

Executive Director Jeremy Burton receiving MA House resolution marking Holocaust Remembrance Day

OUR WORK TO COMBAT ANTISEMITISM AND HATRED INCLUDED:

- The year began with a solidarity letter from Christian leaders in Boston – many of whom we have formed strong, deep partnerships with over many years. They brought together over 1,000 Christian leaders from across MA to sign a letter decrying violence against Jews.
- This year, JCRC and our partners championed An Act Concerning Genocide Education, which passed the Senate, and if signed into law, will promote Holocaust education in MA schools. JCRC joined with ADL, the Armenian National Committee, and over 50 community organizations to support the bill, which moved out of Committee and unanimously passed the Senate with momentum to enact it in the upcoming session.
- We are creating mobile and virtual tours of the New England Holocaust Memorial to launch in June 2021, which will provide essential education on the legacy of the Holocaust, the voices of survivors telling their own stories while they are still able to provide their own testimony.
- JCRC held our 14th annual Israel Arbeiter Holocaust Essay Contest, with hundreds of entries from local middle and high school students, and six winners honored during our virtual Yom HaShoah program, each of whom were awarded educational scholarships.

As COVID ravaged prisons across America as well as the economy, our immigration work prioritized the safety of those detained not only in Boston, but across the country.

We joined with our interfaith partners in raising funds to pay bonds at crucial moments when other funds were depleted. And we supported families facing financial and health challenges, leveraging many of our resources to add additional support to immigrant families in our networks impacted by the pandemic.

Confinement => Contagion

STORY SPOTLIGHT: KJ GRANTED ASYLUM

In 2018, JCRC met K.J.*, a Ugandan asylum seeker, one of many detainees we connected with in our work to seek justice for immigrants and refugees. With our partners, JCRC helped secure pro bono legal support for him as he worked to gain asylum. With JCRC's encouragement, K.J. became a resource for synagogue communities seeking to learn more about the inhumane conditions endured by people in immigration detention. In his presentations, K.J. stressed the critical importance of the community of support we have built for people in detention. Though K.J.'s lawyer, a member of a synagogue we engaged in this work, relocated out of the Boston area, he stayed with K.J. through two and a half years of delayed hearings. After years of legal limbo due to the gutting of the U.S. asylum system, in 2020, against all odds, K.J. was granted asylum. He is now overwhelmed with relief and gratitude by this miraculous turn of events.

Advocating for all MA Residents

Throughout this pandemic, JCRC’s Government Affairs team has been working with the Governor and Legislature to ensure that the Jewish social service network and the clients they serve have all the tools they need to stay safe and healthy, and the resources to build their path to economic mobility.

JCRC continues to make the case that investments in children, seniors, and job training are a crucial part of the Massachusetts recovery. JCRC leveraged $9 million for the social services network in the final MA budget, with an overall increase in funding for priority initiatives and a new fund to protect the summer camp industry.

“JCRC’s advocacy team consistently succeeds in securing funding for all MA residents to have equal access to public resources and live lives of dignity and respect. JCRC makes a real difference for thousands of MA citizens; JVS is very lucky to have them as a community resource and we are proud to be their partner.”

Connecting with Israel

Mobilizing the Greater Boston community to deepen its relationship with Israel is central to our mission, and JCRC found new ways to strengthen this connection even when a global pandemic limited travel.

HOW JCRC FORGED CONNECTIONS TO ISRAEL:

- Early in the year, we hosted young adult Shabbat dinners, book clubs, and Israeli and Palestinian peacebuilders.
- During the pandemic, we quickly moved to launch our virtual “Pathways to Peace” webinar series, featuring Israelis and Palestinians telling their stories of identity, friendship, and cohesion even during a time of social distancing.

These conversations, highlighting how Israeli and Palestinian peacebuilders were continuing to work together even during a global pandemic, engaged hundreds of Bostonians in conversation about Israelis and Palestinians working toward mutual recognition and respect. We also leveraged our relationships with our Israel Study Tour alumni to promote our peacebuilding partners.

- JCRC held Israel news briefings throughout the year.
- JCRC held a briefing with ALLMEP, the largest and fastest growing network of Palestinian and Israeli peacebuilders, to discuss the impact of COVID-19 on Israeli and Palestinian peacebuilding.
- With our partners at ALLMEP, we advocated for passage of the Nita Lowey Partnership for Peace Act. Passed by Congress in December, a new fund will be created to invest $250 million in grassroots peacebuilding over the next five years.
- We highlighted ways in which COVID-19 is impacting Israeli-Palestinian peacebuilding efforts.

We highlighted many Israeli-Palestinian grassroots organizations working to meet these needs, including the Abraham Initiatives, with whom we discussed their work to create widespread positive social change in the field of Jewish-Arab relations in Israel.

Building Partnerships through Service

An author visit arranged by a bat mitzvah student through GBJCL

Volunteers in JCRC's Greater Boston Jewish Coalition for Literacy (GBJCL) set the children of Greater Boston up for future success by instilling confidence and a love of reading.

Over 90% of volunteers see progress in students in the areas of reading comprehension, motivation, communication, and confidence.

Since March, many students have been isolated and disconnected from their learning communities, making the special one-to-one relationships provided by tutors, that much more crucial.

This year, GBJCL's virtual tutoring went beyond academics to prioritize the value at the core of our work: our relationships with students. Many volunteers have prioritized maintaining connection with our young friends during the pandemic, transcending the limitations of Zoom to forge new relationships.

GBJCL pivoted to virtual tutoring in close consultation with our school partners, training tutors to connect with their students in this new way to maintain connections and continue learning.

"That gives us the resiliency to continue to gather, to continue to meet, continue to celebrate our culture and our faith as a community."
